The Health and Human Services Department's GrantSolutions partners with more than 1,500 national grant programs to improve the efficiency and reporting on grant program outcomes. It picks technologies that are leading edge and expansive to do so, listening to its customers' business needs, according to its Executive Director Michael Curtis. In fact, the program is partnering with a team from Johns Hopkins University on artificial intelligence and machine learning to analyze data, and plans to change the future with collaboration and information sharing.
